OLD BUSINESS

President Crawford let Council know that he and Secretary Durstine attended a meeting at Titusville City Hall today regarding the water agreement or at least that is what the meeting was thought to be for. It ended up being a meeting with the City's engineer talking about their issues and wells. A lot of what was talked about has nothing to do with the Borough. In addition to the three representatives from Titusville, April Averill Oil Creek Crawford County Secretary, Gannett Fleming (the city engineer), and Josh from EADS (the Borough engineer) were also there. Brendan Linton, the Region 1 project manager from PennVest was available via zoom. The city is aware that the Borough is looking into its own water source. The agreement is up at the end of July and the city is to provide a new agreement for review by Borough Council sometime around October when they have other paperwork due. An opt-out clause was discussed.

Everything is good. With the heat, grass is not growing as fast as it was. Still getting comments on the flags. There was a quick discussion regarding military banner placement requests becoming increasingly difficult with the number of banners.

ROUND TABLE	Vice-President Long put it out there that she is still in shock that it is July, and the Festival is in three weeks. President Crawford led a short discussion regarding a water leak that was found via meter reading at the West State Street apartment building. The guys went into the basement and couldn't believe there was anyone living in it. There is standing water and moldy unbelievable conditions there. One apartment was entered, and they couldn't describe how bad it actually is. Councilwoman McMunn suggested calling the Health Department and agreed if HUD was involved their inspections would have already found this out. She went on to say now that Council is aware the place is unfit to live in, they have got to do something. President Crawford added that the upstairs window that used to be missing has been open for years.
